The Affinity Arts

For improved breathing, movement and sense of freedom.

The art of moving and breathing promotes balance and we will introduce you to a selection of simple and effective body therapies that you will first learn through practising with us, and then try on your own every day.

Santa Yoga(s)

A rational and newer form of the historic yoga practice specifically tailored to the needs of today's individuals. Our practices have been developed to help you cope with the contradictions and stresses of modern life (isolation, stress caused by work-related issues or a climate of general uncertainty, exceeding one's limits, burnout syndrome).

Mindfulness Meditation

The practice of mindfulness meditation is simply being fully in the moment and being aware of one's inner sensations, perceptions, thoughts and emotions. This practice promotes a state of mind that protects against stress and helps quiet the hurried minds or control the mind. In addition, this discipline is said to have a positive effect on health in general. Neuroscientists are also interested in mindfulness as it appears to have an impact on the functioning of the human brain.

Makko Ho

Makko Ho is a Japanese method that consists of specific stretching exercises developed in the 20th century by the Shiatsu Master, Shizuto Masunaga. This precise and gentle exercise method focuses on the meridians and 10 minutes of everyday practice is enough to set the body's energy in motion and ensure its proper functioning.

5 Tibetan Rites

These 5 ancient rituals inspired by yoga are simple and fun physical exercises that are accessible to everyone and are a powerful way to stimulate overall vitality, restore energy and strength to the body. Daily practice maintains youthfulness and contributes to longevity.

Respirology

Breathing is an innate behaviour but proper breathing does not come naturally to most people. This gentle method is already popular in Germany, in Canada and with freedivers; it involves simple exercises that help regulate one's breathing and thus regain control in order to better manage one's emotions, efforts and feelings. There are specific exercises for having a good start to the day, boosting one's energy or stopping a panic attack.

Well-Being Qi Gong

This traditional Chinese gymnastics and breathing science is based on the knowledge and control of vital energy, combining often slow movements, breathing exercises and concentration. Regular practice has various benefits: illness prevention and healing, maintaining good health, improved life expectancy, quality of life and self-development.
